Continuing Professional Studies is the campus resource for a wide variety of programs that serve multiple campus and community constituencies. In partnership with on-campus academic departments and also community-based entities, the office provides high-quality credit and noncredit courses, workshops, and certificate programs using a variety of locations, schedules, and technologies. The College Access Program (CAP) is housed within Continuing Professional Studies, collaborating with school districts across New York State to engage high school students in earning college credits while also working with those districts to provide additional teaching credentials to instructors in support of changing programmatic needs. Office staff provide assistance in developing and implementing specialized programming to meet current and evolving workforce needs.

Continuing Professional Studies is the campus resource for credit for experiential learning options, including the College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) and Miller Analogies Test (MAT).
